

The telephone network is an "essential facility" for which telephone companies should be required to allow equal access to all Internet Service Providers. It would be an undesirable monopolistic practice to allow telephone companies to limit access to their own internet service divisions.